These events will help educate federal contractors seeking opportunities to employ skilled workers in communities across America. Seminar attendance is free, but registration is required. Once registered, additional information including links to sessions will be provided.

OSHA Hurricane Preparedness Resources for Emergency Responders

As the 2025 hurricane season approaches, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) is highlighting several key resources available to help employers prepare for, respond to, and recover from hurricanes and related hazards.

OSHA's Emergency Preparedness and Response pages provide information on how to prepare and train for emergencies, and outline the hazards to be mindful of when an emergency occurs. These resources provide information for employers and workers across industries and include material specifically for those directly involved in response and recovery efforts.

OSHA encourages employers and workers to review and share the following OSHA Safety and Health Topics pages:

- Hurricane Preparedness and Response – Information on hurricane warnings, potential hazards, and safety precautions for employers and workers after a storm.
- Flood Preparedness and Response – Guidance for businesses and workers on preparing for floods and staying safe during and after such events.
- Tornado Preparedness and Response – Resources to help prepare for tornadoes and manage post-event hazards.
- Heat Illness Prevention – OSHA's campaign to educate employers and workers on recognizing and preventing heat-related illnesses.
